

SMALL CHANGES ADD UP

Using a face oil made from mostly organic ingredients won't save the world, but it'll keep a few oz of pesticides out of the environment and get you glowing.

COCKTAIL FACT

Catherine Denesque once remarked on aging, "At a certain point you have to choose between your face and your ass."

Amazing Grace

The Bite:

How sweet the smell...of L'Huile de Grace face oil (pronounced l'wheel-duh-gras, for all of you who dropped French 101), from SF spa Le Sanctuaire. Made locally from 100% natural, mostly organic ingredients, including a tree sap called Sangre de Drago that heals blemishes and stimulates the production of collagen, L'Huile puts our old moisturizer to shame. It also works on all skin types, and was designed for both men and women. Not only will it spare your skin from the parabens and petroleum-based ingredients found in conventional products, but it also gives you the satisfaction of knowing that your purchase helps to support sustainable forest workers in Guatemala. Did we mention how much we love its fresh, earthy smell? And Grace your skin care fears relieved...

Wanna Try?

Le Sanctuaire (415-401-6930). 1-oz bottle, $62.

View this tip online at http://www.idealbite.com/tiplibrary/sanfrancisco/amazing_grace

All editorial suggestions in this tip are the result of testing and a preference for the tip topic. No advertiser has paid to have its company referenced in the tip.